Local merchants ponder buying cable franchise

By BILL SHERROD

The Arco Cablevision franchise saga took a new turn at Monday's meeting of the Appomattox Mayor and Council, when local merchant Roy Franklin said he and a partner are considering purchasing the ill-fated cable business.

Franklin appeared before the Council and said he and Ronald Coleman have been examining the possibilities of purchasing the cable television franchise.

"We're studying the system now," Franklin said. "There's nothing definite now, but if everything in it (the system) looks okay, we'll probably buy it," he added.

Stan Deimler, current owner of the cable system in Appomattox, said he is in the process of having a satellite-signal receiver installed in the system, which would increase the cable's station offerings.

The Arco cablevision franchise is scheduled to expire Feb. 21, and the Council has threatened to cancel the Arco franchise if the system is not in compliance with the franchise agreement by that time. Last month, the County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to cancel the Arco franchise outside the Appomattox Town limits.

Franklin told the Council that he and Coleman would prefer that Arco be allowed to retain the franchise until they can make a definite decision on whether to purchase it. He noted that this would avoid the trouble of putting the franchise out for bid, as would be required by law if the Council canceled it.

Mayor Ronald C. Spiggle noted that, even if the franchise-agreement terms have not been met by Feb. 21, it would probably be 45 to 90 days before the franchise was actually lifted.

The Councilmen agreed to table the issue to a recess meeting on Feb. 25 after the original franchise agreement is scheduled to expire.

In other business, Council members received a report on the status of the town water wells. Town Manager, Bill Britton noted that the well water levels are approximately 10 feet below normal level, and that a new well discovered behind the Elementary School on Route 460 has not yet been certified by the state.

The Councilmen decided not to institute water conservation measures at this time, as the threat of a severe water shortage is still not definite.

In a related matter, Britton reminded the Councilmen that the new water rates will be in effect on the coming water bills, effective Feb.1

Council was also informed that the State Highway Department has decided not to put flashing warning lights on Route 460 near the Armstrong factory exit.

Board to meet

The Appomattox County School Board will meet today (Wednesday) at 3 p.m. in the school board office, according to Lloyd Walton, superintendent of schools.

Board members will consider bids for new school buses, as well as bids for the sale of fuel oil.

The board members will also review information relative to financing public education during the 1981-82 school session, as well as the regular monthly reports.

Voc Ed students get lowdown on job market

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

The job market of today is demanding highly trained, skilled individuals and the Appomattox County High School's Vocational Education Department, under the direction of Richard Carter is turning out qualified workers.

Approximately 85 percent of students in grades eight through 12 in the Appomattox County School System are enrolled in a vocational education program; the State of Virginia average is approximately 65 percent of total enrollment in vocational education.

Of all students enrolled in Vocational Ed at ACHS, 98 percent of the graduates have a job interest skill.

In 1973 a total of 963 students were enrolled in Vocational Ed; now there is a total of 1399.

"We're finding out that a high percentage of students graduating from ACHS stay here in the community or in a nearby community; this is why we need a good, strong vocational education program," said Richard Carter, VE Director. "We should make sure our graduates who are not going on for further education have a skill," continued Carter.

All courses in Vocational Ed at ACHS are open to both male and female students. While there is not a female student in brick-laying at present, there are a lot of females in agriculture and quite a few males in home economics.

There are five major areas covered by the vocational education program at ACHS.

In the agriculture education, there are three options; machinery service, production, and ornamental horticulture. In Machinery service the student is trained to repair farm equipment and to assemble farm machinery. Taking a tractor apart and reassembling it is part of their trainig. In the area of production, the emphasis is on growing and producing....being a good farmer. Greenhouse production is taught in ornamental horticulture.

"In home economics," laughed Carter, "we are getting away from 'stirring and stiching' and getting into management, budgeting and related subjects."

In occupational home economics.....food and clothing, the student is trained to go directly into the job market. In the family living program, the work is designed for the students who have not had home ec; 50 percent of these students are male.

In the very near future, the clerical occupations, encompassing 20 million workers, will be the nation's largest occupational group. Vocational education at ACHS is preparing students to meet this need by offering two programs in the field of business.

One program offers training in general secretarial and related subjects with emphasis on stenographic skills; a second program offers clerical and related subjects.

Approximately 85 perrent who finish business education at ACHS go directly to jobs, while 15 percent go on for further education in this field.

The field of retailing and wholesaling, and in particular, the service occupations are in need of trained people to fill

Bloodmobile gets 'dressed up'

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

When the Red Cross Bloodmobile comes to Appomattox on Monday, February 23, there will be a change and you don't want to miss it!

The Appalachian Regional Red Cross Blook Services is introducing a new look for the '80s'. New equipment for collecting blood is collection furnishings which have been in use since 1950.

The American Red Cross and the Rhode Island School of Design worked together for 5 years to plan, design, and field-test this new equipment. Red Cross Blood Service workers described qualities which blood collection equipment and furnishing need to possess; couches for the donors must be comfortable, easy to sit in and rise from; a donor must be able to sit erect and chat with others while giving blood. The equipment should enable the nurse to work efficiently and to reduce fatigue, while supplies should be at her fingertips. The equipment should be easily movable and simple to work with and should make donor-collection sites pleasant places to visit.

And, that's exactly what has been designed and you'll see it on February 23. With the new equipment, health history interviews are conducted in relative privacy, without clutter. Donors will find it easier to have their blood pressure and hemoglobin tested. Donors, because of the new lounges are permited to sit up and see what is going on. Donors can talk easily with the nurse and other donors.

Nurses are seated comfortably on chairs with caster wheels, with all their supplies in "saddlebag" pods at their fingertips. In addition, the equipment is so light and compact, the people who set up and dismantle blood collection sites find their job much easier.

Alice C. Martin, Chairman, Appomattox County Red Cross Bloodmobile Services, says, "I'm so sure that all of you are going to turn out in such numbers this time that we are going to need some room to call by telephone for this visit. We're getting extra publicity from the Times Virginian and from WTTX and I just know you will hear about this visit so please make a note when you read this so you won't forget the exact date, February 23."

"Last February we set a record here in Appomattox," continues Mrs. Martin," when we collected 150 units of blood. On our special Christmas visit we collected a total of 157 units which fell short of our 200 goal. Let's make it up this time!"

Won't you plan now to donate a unit of blood on February 23 and why don't you bring a friend?

WHEN THE BLOODMOBILE comes to Appomattox on February there will be a variety of new equipment for the comfort of Appomattox County blood donors. Shown here is a new chair which will enable the donor to sit up while giving blood, and thus be more at ease during the process.

Comment sought

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is seeking public comment until February 17 on its midyear adjustment of the support price for milk and the prices and terms of purchase for butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk by the department's Commodity Credit Corporation.

CCC supports milk prices by purchasing surplus products from the market.

Congress mandates that USDA must adjust the milk support price to reflect changes in the parity index in the first half of the marketing year. The adjusted support price will be effective April 1 through September 30, the second half of the marketing year.

The index of prices paid, interest, taxes and wage rates (the parity index) is projected to increase about 6.9 percent between October 1, 1980 and April 1, 1981. This would result in a 6.9 percent increase in the support price on April 1.

The support price in effect since October 1, 1980, the beginning of the 1980-81 marketing year, is $12.80 per hundredweight for manufacturing milk with 3.5 percent milkfat content or $13.10 per hundredweight for milk with 3.67 percent milkfat, the national average.

Written comments should be directed to the Director, Procurement and Sales Division, ASCS-USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013. All written comments will be available for inspection at the office of the Director during regular business hours.

A Friday the thirteenth is staring us in the face, but before that comes Lincoln's Birthday and after it comes Washington's Birthday. Maybe it will be just a regular Friday, maybe evan payday, and maybe the thirteenth will be overshadowed by the fourteenth which is Valentine's Day. I note that Virginia highway deaths as of now are slightly below same date last year and let us keep it that way. Sunday in Alexandria there will be a reenactment of a Revolutionary War Battle as four re-created units will have at each other with muskets and demonstrate cannons and flintlocks. On the 22nd there will be a George Washington Birthday celebration at his birthplace, Wakefield. Ah, yes, never a dull moment in Virginia. Plus the ginger of some great Basketball games.

Appomattox is proud of the many newcomers who have come to live in this historic locality in recent years. Met a special one a few days ago and that would be Bro. W.L. Five daughters and two sons; including two daughters and a son also here in Appomattox.
